Problem- Oriented Policing

Improving Policing: A Problem-Oriented Approach

Herman Goldstein

The police have been particularly susceptible to the "means over ends" syndrome, placing more emphasis in their improvement efforts on organization and operating methods than on the substantive outcome of their work. This condition has been fed by the professional movement within the police field, with its concentration on the staffing, management, and organization of police agencies. More and more persons are questioning the widely held assumption that improvements in the internal management of police departments will enable the police to deal more effectively with the problems they are called upon to handle. If the police are to realize a greater return on the investment made in improving their operations, and if they are to mature as a profession, they must concern themselves more directly with the end product of their efforts.

Meeting this need requires that the police develop a more systematic process for examining and addressing the problems that the public expects them to handle. It requires identifying these problems in more precise terms, researching each problem, documenting the nature of the current police response, assessing its adequacy and the adequacy of existing authority and resources, engaging in a broad exploration of alternatives to present responses, weighing the merits of these alternatives, and choosing from among them.

Improvements in staffing, organization, and management remain important, but they should be achieved—and may, in fact, be more achievable—within the context of a more direct concern with the outcome of policing.

Complaints from passengers wishing to use the Bagnall to Greenfields bus service that "the drivers were speeding past queues of up to 30 people with a smile and a wave of a hand" have been met by a statement pointing out that "it is impossible for the drivers to keep their timetable if they have to stop for passengers."¹

All bureaucracies risk becoming so preoccupied with running their organizations and getting so involved in their methods of operating that they lose sight

What Is Problem-Oriented Policing?

PROBLEM-ORIENTED POLICING (POP) is an approach to policing in which (1) DISCRETE PIECES OF POLICE BUSINESS (each consisting of a cluster of similar incidents, whether crimes or acts of disorder, that the police are expected to handle) are subject to (2) MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATION (drawing on the especially honed skills of crime analysts and the accumulated experience of operating field personnel) in hopes that what is freshly learned about each problem will lead to discovering a (3) NEW AND MORE EFFECTIVE STRATEGY for dealing with it. POP places a high value on new responses that are (4) PREVENTIVE in nature, that are (5) NOT DEPENDENT ON THE USE OF THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM, and that (6) ENGAGE OTHER PUBLIC AGENCIES, THE COMMUNITY AND THE PRIVATE SECTOR when their involvement has the potential for significantly contributing to the reduction of the problem. POP carries a commitment to (7) IMPLEMENTING THE NEW STRATEGY, (8) RIGOROUSLY EVALUATING ITS EFFECTIVENESS, and, subsequently, (9) REPORTING THE RESULTS in ways that will benefit other police agencies and that will ultimately contribute to (10) BUILDING A BODY OF KNOWLEDGE that supports the further professionalization of the police.
